11. Minneapolis Park Board Engagement Meetings in July

Throughout the history of the park system, community involvement in decision-making has successfully enhanced the City's parks and recreational facilities, programs, and services.

The MPRB is working to develop a new public participation and engagement policy to revise current standards and provide consistent practices for working and communicating with the public. This policy effort aligns with goals and strategies outlined in the 2007-2020 MPRB Comprehensive Plan.

To hear suggestions and ideas from the community on this policy, the MPRB will conduct public meetings at multiple locations throughout the city in July. Community preferences for being involved and what subject matter is important are examples of discussion topics at each public meeting.

All meetings will be held at 6:30 p.m. Meetings will be held at:

13. Energy efficiency rebates, programs help rental property owners save money

url: <http://www.ci.minneapolis.mn.us/news/20100713RentalPropertyEnergyRebates.asp>

The City of Minneapolis, Xcel Energy, CenterPoint Energy and Minnesota Housing are teaming up to help rental property owners take advantage of programs and rebates to help make their properties more energy efficient. Rental license renewal notices are being mailed to every rental property owner in Minneapolis in the next few days, and property owners will receive special energy efficiency information with their renewal notice.

The City of Minneapolis is committed to ensuring that all properties are safe, healthy environments for residents, and promoting energy efficiency is one way to improve the city's housing stock and help the environment. Working together, the partners are combining their resources to reach out to property owners to help them learn about cost-effective ways to improve energy efficiency.

Government programs and rebates from Xcel Energy and CenterPoint Energy make it easier and more cost-effective than ever to upgrade the energy efficiency of a rental property. There are savings options for all kinds of rental buildings, big or small. There's also help available to pay for energy efficiency upgrades.

An energy audit can help evaluate a property to find out the best way to make energy efficiency improvements. Options include simple ways to save energy and money on electric and natural gas, ranging from simply replacing light bulbs with compact fluorescent bulbs to making bigger renovations like replacing water heaters or tuning up boilers.

Additionally, Minnesota Housing and Community Action of Minneapolis have grants and loans that qualifying property owners can use to make upgrades. Learn more about how to get started making energy efficiency upgrades, and who to contact.

Water pollution comes from many different sources, including our everyday activities. How we care for our yards and grounds, wash and maintain our cars, and even dispose of pet waste can contribute to water pollution in the Mississippi River. The hard surfaces of our driveways, sidewalks, and pathways increase the amount of stormwater entering the stormdrains. There are many choices we can make to reduce these harmful impacts on water quality.

Become a partner organization with the Mississippi Watershed Management Organization (MWMO) by applying for a Stewardship Fund grant to work together to improve water quality in the MWMO. The MWMO includes parts of Minneapolis, Saint Paul, the City of Saint Anthony Village, and Lauderdale. Projects funded through the Stewardship Fund Program should achieve the following:

1. Improve water quality or improve water and natural resource management
2. Build community understanding, knowledge, and initiative related to water and natural resource issues and solutions

Over $200,000 is available through three types of grants

Mini Grants up to $2,000 – March, June, and September cycles each year

15. Online survey seeks Minneapolis residents' drinking water habits

url: <http://www.ci.minneapolis.mn.us/news/20100707DrinkingWaterSurvey.asp>

The average person drinks about 64 ounces of water a day. How much do you drink? And where do you get that water?

The City of Minneapolis is conducting an online survey to get answers to what source residents go to get a glass of thirst-quenching water. It's open to anyone who lives in, works in or visits Minneapolis. This is a short survey of about a dozen questions, and it should take less than five minutes to complete.

The purpose of the survey is to give the City a general understanding of water consumption in Minneapolis. The survey does not ask people to identify themselves or provide contact information.

The survey is open through August 20, 2010.

16. Free Internet access now available throughout Minneapolis

url: <http://www.ci.minneapolis.mn.us/news/20100625FreeWiFi.asp>

In its continuing efforts to bridge the digital divide, the City of Minneapolis announced on Friday, June 25 that residents and visitors will now be able to access the Internet for free from 117 "Wireless Minneapolis" hotspots throughout the city. These hotspots are one of the many community benefits that resulted from the City of Minneapolis' contract with USI Wireless, the company that built the wireless network blanketing the entire city.

When connected to one of these hotspots, folks will be able access any website on the Internet for up to one hour. After one hour, a user's session will end; however, the user can log-in again to continue accessing the Internet. A credit card number will be required to access the Internet from a "Wireless Minneapolis" hotspot for homeland security purposes but the credit card will not be charged.

In selecting the locations for the 117 "Wireless Minneapolis" hotspots, the City looked for places where people already gather and use computers, and places where free wireless access would encourage people to gather, including parks, plazas, schools, and businesses. Hotspots will be clearly marked with signs that say, "Free Wireless Minneapolis Hotspot Courtesy: City of Minneapolis USI Wireless." The free wireless signal will be available up to 600 feet from the sign.

In addition to the 117 hotspots, the City of Minneapolis and USI Wireless also offer free "Wireless Community" accounts to nonprofit organizations that provide free computer access to the public, and an online "Civic Garden" that provides a free level of service for anyone who can receive the USI Wireless signal. The Civic Garden offers free access to a wealth of public sector information about government, education, and community services. In 2006 the City of Minneapolis signed a 10-year contract with USI Wireless of Minnetonka to provide Minneapolis with cutting-edge broadband technology. USI Wireless is a private company that owns, built and manages the wireless network, making Minneapolis one of the first large cities in the United States to go wireless. The network is allowing the City to deliver services more efficiently and effectively than ever before.

17. Healthy Housing Indicators Now Available

The Housing Division of the City's Community Planning & Economic Development Department is pleased to announce the release of our first Healthy Housing Indicators Analysis. The report was prepared by research and housing staff with assistance from the City Assessor and Department of Regulatory Services. Its purpose is to:

- better understand the impact of market challenges on city housing stock, particularly at the neighborhood level;
- improve our ongoing monitoring of key housing trends;
- better understand the relationship between various program interventions and key housing indicators;

- answer the question of how much public investment will be required to turn around challenged neighborhoods.

The report covers the period from 2005 through 2009 and is organized under indicators of housing distress, investment, and value. Most indicators of distress worsened during the study period; none of this information is particularly surprising, as these local impacts followed national trends. Please note the increase in non-homesteaded single family properties, caused in part by a 2001 state law change that lowered the property tax liability for non-homesteaded properties.

The report was presented to the City Council's Community Development Committee on May 4th. A copy of the full report is available here. The accompanying staff report is available here. The neighborhood level detailed numbers have been compiled in a file here.

Many neighborhood groups are engaged in efforts to maintain and improve their housing stock. We encourage you to carefully review this information to aid in your own program design, and to take advantage of city programs that are available to address housing needs. A quick reference guide to the City's key programs that are designed to respond to the housing crisis follows:

- Minneapolis Foreclosure Recovery Plan: http://www.ci.minneapolis.mn.us/foreclosure/Citys_Foreclosure_Recovery_Plan.asp

- LiveMSP.org has great information on homebuying and provides a directory of homebuyer incentive programs and resources by neighborhood.

We hope this tool is useful as you evaluate the needs of your community. Please let us know if you have any questions about the reports or just want to discuss your neighborhood housing issues.
